

Book unites towns

IT WAS a big night for the people of Narrogin, Wagin, Brookton and Pingelly on Thursday when all four communities came together to celebrate the launch of a Community Arts Network WA book.

The compilation included photos from the community that were symbolic of the towns they lived in.

Special guest was Mary G, a well-known Kimberley larrikin. A moving part of the night was a soundscape created by a Film and Television Institute workshop that revealed the want from many Noongars to "forgive and forget" and to reunite as one big family.
